Collectors and some dealers can easily and readily decide whether a quarter of this date has been altered from any following date (usually a '58). When the Government altered the standard, in 1853, they decreased the weight from 412½ grains to 385 grains, making a difference of 27½ grains on each dollar of subsidiary money. To show the change, they put arrow-heads at side of date and sun-burst on reverse; consequently a quarter without arrow heads of this date would weigh nearly 7 grains more than a quarter of any date thereafter. In a balance scale a poor quarter without arrows of this date would weigh more than a new or uncirculated one of 1854 or following dates. Another test: they are always struck over a '52, the curl of the 2 showing below upper knob of the 3.
